May 1992 to February 1998. Sybase, Emeryville, CA

Senior Product Specialist.

Distributed and Middleware Products

- Technical liaison to strategic customers, VARS, and to the Sybase sales force around the world.
- Qualified customer sales opportunities and created proof-of-concept prototypes using middleware products, SQL Server and SQL Anywhere.
- Designed and developed applications that tested and evaluated functionality, performance and usability of beta products. Applications tested the capability of the products to reflect business models and were written in VisualBasic, VisualBasic with ODBC objects, PowerBuilder and C++.
- Wrote and taught education class for Beta partners and professional services, system consultants, technical support. Supported Beta customers and pre sales with installation, writing applications and trouble shooting problems. Returned recommendations back to development based on the evaluation of customer requirements and feedback. Products that were supported were: new messaging software named dbQ that provides asynchronous messaging queuing within transactional boundaries and Object Orient middleware named ObjectCONNECT, that maps objects in the application to a relational database. During the development process an ObjectBuilder is used to map object interfaces to the relational database. An OLE automation server processes commands from the application and exposes the user defined interfaces to the application. Both these products were tested and optimized against Sybase SQL Server and SQL Anywhere.
